SCHOOLS

Superintendent is sticking around

Some complaints heard about process

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Louise Demas, interim superintendent of Cohasset Schools, has been offered the permanent superintendent position. The School Committee voted unanimously on Nov. 30 to make the offer.

"She has so much experience in so many areas and has brought so much to us in such a short period of time that we're all very excited for the next couple of years," said Chairwoman Jeanne Astino.

Most importantly, she said, "rapport within the buildings is paramount," and after eight years in the district, Demas definitely has that.

The committee was in complete agreement, and what's more, they got there without much deliberation at all. The answer just seemed obvious.

"Louise has a vision for the future," said committee member Katie Dugan. "When I reflected on the superintendent, that was very important to me."

Dugan noted that Demas had articulated the school system's strengths and, more importantly, weaknesses as part of her goals and entry plan presented on Nov. 1.

"If we're going to move forward as a district, we have to understand what we're lacking," said Dugan. "The middle school and early literacy are areas of opportunity, and Louise identified that."

Some parents, however, felt that more discussion

UPDATE

Flood Maps

Revised documents reflect better data

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset residents know that even the wildest storm wouldn't put Harbor businesses like Atlantica under 22 feet of storm surge. But that's exactly what was shown on FEMA's flood insurance rate maps released in 2012.

The Town has been working to amend the maps for close to two years. A letter of map revision (LOMR) was submitted last November and the revisions were accepted by FEMA as of Nov. 4 this year.

"There's been a significant reduction in the floodplain for most affected areas," said DPW Director Brian Joyce in a presentation to the Board of Selectmen on Nov. 25. The presentation can be viewed on the Town website at CohassetMA.org.

Another Cohasset Eagle takes wing

Project improved Osgood outdoor classroom

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Becoming an Eagle Scout is hard enough when you're living in town. When you're going to boarding school an hour away, well, most Boy Scouts don't make it.

Quentin Hill made it.

Hill had his Eagle Board of Review in November, well in advance of his 18th birthday next August (Scouts age out of the program after they turn 18, whether or not they've achieved Eagle rank). To get there, he had to fulfill three criteria: earn Merit Badges, take leadership roles, and complete a community project.

Hill said he enjoyed learning about first aid, emergency preparedness, and wilderness survival for Merit Badges because those topics were hands-on and practical. Some of the other badges, like personal management, didn't feel as rewarding.

He got to try lots of new activities during the National Jamboree in West Virginia in 2013. One of the most interesting was railroading, in which Scouts learned how to conduct a train using lights and signals and how to troubleshoot track issues using a model train set.

"None of the badges changed what I wanted to do in life," said Hill, who wants to teach animation,

POLICE BEAT

Two deer put down after collision with cars

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Deer crashes

Lovesick deer are on the move big time in Cohasset. There were several reports of deer vs. car accidents over the past week. None resulted in injuries to the drivers, but two of the deer involved in collisions survived the impact but were suffering and had to be put down at the scene. In all recent cases, the deer apparently darted out in the roadway and there was little the motorists could do to avoid a collision, police said.

On Thursday (Nov. 24) at 8:42 p.m., a deer was struck on King Street by Good Sport. The driver did not stay around. Officers reported the deer had two broken legs. They removed the animal to the side of the road and put it down. A short time later an Avalon caller reported hearing gunshots and police said, those were the shots used to kill the deer.

On Wednesday (Nov. 30), around 5:37 a.m., an officer was dispatched to Atlantic Avenue and Howard Gleason Road where a 54-year-old Cohasset woman had been traveling north on Atlantic when a deer ran into the middle of the road and struck the front of her 2006 Volvo.

The officer reported the deer was on the side of the road, was still alive but unable to move. To end its suffering, the officer put the deer down with the department shotgun mounted in the cruiser.

This is the mating season for deer so they are more active than usual.

Cruiser towed

An unmarked police cruiser had to be towed last week due to a problem with the brakes on Monday afternoon (Nov. 21). The detective, who was on his way to Plymouth on police business, stopped when he felt it was not safe to continue. The 2006 Crown Victoria has well over 100,000 miles.

Delayed ignition

A Jerusalem Road home had to be ventilated on Tuesday (Nov. 22) when smoke filled the laundry room and the homeowner called for help. As it turned out there was a problem with the oil burner and the smoke was due to delayed ignition.

Locked in car

A frantic mother called police for help on Wednesday morning (Nov. 23) when she inadvertently locked her 7-month-old baby in her 2009 Toyota Camry at Stop & Shop. The baby was in an infant seat. Police called Express Towing, which was able to gain access to the car.

Dumpster in road

Police were called about a traffic hazard when Graham Waste left an empty dumpster in the road at Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road last Wednesday (Nov. 23) while the company changed out a full dumpster. The dumpster was moved from the road, police said.

Suspicious activity

Police were unable to catch up with a truck with a bunch of teens that the caller said was going into the construction site off Tad Lane last Thursday night (Nov. 24).

Civil matter

A worker and his employer were told to handle a dispute over who owns the tools with their attorneys to determine who owns what, police said. The caller reported on Saturday morning (Nov. 26) that the company would not let him have his tools.

MV stop/tow

An officer on patrol ran a check through the Registry of Motor Vehicle on a 2000 Acura SUV that showed the registration had been suspended due to a bad check sent to the RMV, police said. The officer pulled the SUV over at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Marion Way. The 60-year-old Hingham woman who was driving is being summonsed to court for operating with a suspended registration.

Vandalism

A resident in a street off Jerusalem Road reported that sometime overnight Saturday into Sunday (Nov. 26-Nov. 27) smashed her mailbox with a baseball bat. The mailbox is valued at $400.

Police encourage residents to report vandalism like this so they can see if there is a pattern in the area. No other incidents were reported.

POLICE

Car hits car then house on Hull Street

At 11:15 a.m., Tuesday (Nov. 29), Cohasset police responded to 243 Hull St. for a reported crash.

On arrival officers spoke to a 18-year old Hull woman that had been operating a 2004 Jeep Cherokee. She told officers that she was turning left from Rockland Street in Hingham onto Rte. 228 North at West Corner, when she lost control of her vehicle, went into a spin, and crashed into a parked 2003 Toyota and the side of a single family residence at 243 Hull St.

There were no injuries on scene and the Jeep had to be towed. The Cohasset Building Inspector was called to the crash and determined that there was no structural damage to the home. The Hull woman was issued a citation for failure to drive in marked lanes. It is unclear if anyone was home at the time of the crash, police said.

Churches hosting annual Village Fair

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

It's time to get your jingle on at the annual Village Fair, hosted by the churches of Cohasset Village. The fair takes place Saturday, Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Santa Claus will be accepting wish lists and taking photos with kids on the Common from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds benefit the Cohasset Appalachian Service Project. Photos can be picked up at Second Congregational Church.

Each church has something to offer, so be sure not to skip anything!

St. Stephen's

"The busy elves at St. Stephen's are preparing for Village Fair traditions both old and new," says the invitation for the Episcopal Church's Holly Jolly Christmas Bazaar.

This year, the book sale has been scaled back to make room for new traditions. While parents shop at the toy, book and gift bazaar, kids can enjoy classic holiday movies in Rudolph's Den up on the stage in Walton Rogers Hall. Popcorn, grilled cheese and hot dogs will be available for hungry kids.

Hungry adults can enjoy muffins, donuts, bagels, and hot beverages in the morning or homemade soups and chili at lunchtime. The café will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is cash-only.

Shoppers can peruse the bake table and country store for homemade breads, pastries, preserves, sauces, and sweets. Try your luck at the silent auction and raffle, featuring Red Sox tickets, fine art, bird feeders, and more. Or just stock up on stocking stuffers, Yankee Swap gifts, and sweaters for that Ugly Christmas Sweater party!

Back for another year is the children's secret room, where young children can buy and wrap gifts for their families with the help of volunteers from the Appalachian Service Project.

All proceeds benefit the ongoing ministries at St. Stephen's Church, including Father Bill's Place in Quincy, Cohasset Food Pantry, and Hull Animal Rescue.

Second Congo

After picking up your photos with Santa, warm up with some homemade chowder or snack on some fresh Cabot cheese. Shop for handmade baked goods and crafts, including tree skirts, ornaments and arrangements.

There will be an hourly surf-and-turf raffle. Winner takes home six filet mignon. There will also be a silent auction, including a $1,500 gift certificate for a new patient to Hingham orthodontist Dr. Fitzgerald (that's a Christmas present for Mom and Dad!).

Local author Margot Cheel will be signing copies of her new children's book, "What Do You See? Finding Shapes from the Sky," from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There is no admission fee for the fair. Proceeds from the raffle and auction will benefit Christmas in the City, which provides a holiday party to homeless children in Boston.

First Parish

Hunt for treasures such as jewelry, toys, china, linens, and small furniture at First Parish's White Elephant Sale. Or, enter the $1 raffle for a chance to win a $75 dinner at Atlantica or a gingerbread house.

The Rusty Skippers will play their traditional holiday pops concert at the First Parish Meeting House at noon. The band will be taking donations for the Cohasset Food Pantry. The concert and singalong are free to attend – all you have to contribute is your voice!

11TH ANNUAL

Warming up for the 2017 triathlon

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Last year's Triathlon attracted 1,200 athletes and almost as many spectators, thanks to the beautiful weather. WICKED LOCAL STAFF PHOTO

Registration for the 2017 Cohasset Triathlon has officially opened – and, by the end of Friday, it will have officially closed, as well. This race sells out faster than any other triathlon in the country. If you meant to register, don't wait!

The 11th annual Cohasset Tri will take place on Sunday, June 25. As usual, the event will support the Cohasset Education Foundation, the Sandy Beach Association, and the Cohasset Swim Center, along with national organization, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). Last year, the Tri donated over $50,000 to JDRF.

Race Coordinator Bill Burnett anticipates 1,200 athletes, same as last year. The number of spectators, though, will depend on the weather.

In 2016, a beautiful day brought out a bigger crowd than usual. In 2015, it rained so hard that the swim and cycling portions of the race had to be canceled, and hardly anyone wanted to stand around watching the runners. 1,000 spectators would not be a surprise if the sun is out this year.

Burnett has already coordinated with department heads, including police and fire. Over the past decade, he's worked with them to get this event down to an exact science. He said that Main Street will be clear by 9 a.m. on race day.

The Junior Triathlon will take place on Saturday, July 8. Funds from the Junior Tri support the Cohasset Swim Center, Cohasset Education Foundation, and JDRF. Registration is open at CohassetJuniorTri.com.

LIFE AT CHS

Curtain rises for 'Annie' this weekend

CONNOR CURRAN

Performing on multiple days, the play should accommodate all schedules and is great for all ages. Good luck to all participants!

Back to school. After a short break that the entire student body longed for, that period of time has ceased. Many now begin the countdown for the lengthier Winter Break, yet still a few weeks away. Although the weather has been unseasonably warm and we take pleasure in this, I assure you that the senior class despises the warmth as we hope for record setting snowfalls and the occasional power outage.

As actors and actresses throughout the student body continue practicing long hours into the night, the school production of "Annie" quickly approaches. Debuting for the first performance of the week on December 2, the play will incorporate the talent that CHS has to offer with the fascinating story of a timeless classic that many of my peers say you won't want to miss. Performing on multiple days, the play should accommodate all schedules and is great for all ages. Good luck to all participants!

Thanksgiving saw many great endeavors occur. In the 30th anniversary of the Cohasset Hull rivalry, the Skippers made sure The Trophy stayed home in a 20-6 victory. Playing in my final football game, it truly was a memorable moment being surrounded by my team and what seemed to be the entire population of Cohasset as we played in the Skipper Dome one last time.

Also, in a vicious pre-Thanksgiving game against the juniors, the senior girls were able to defeat their underclassmen counterparts 14-6 at the 2016 Powderpuff game.

Lastly, in Skipper news, this past Monday marked the official start of the winter sports season. Hockey, basketball, ski team, wrestling and more will begin competing soon as they have already undergone a week of practice. I am confident our winter Skippers will be just as successful as our fall!

The CHS debate team has again started its successful season of debating other teams around the area. Headed by the esteemed teachers in our English Department, the team is working hard to be victorious, as they have in past years. They have been practicing their arguments and will begin to put that to the test publicly against other schools. With the array of student talent found on the panel, those of whom representing Cohasset, we can be confident in the accomplishment the team will have throughout the debate season.

Overall, Cohasset High is continuing to excel at its activities as it moves into the winter seasons. Therefore, many more news should be upon us as the holiday month draws near!

Holidays

Happy December Cohasset: 'Tis the Season! Although the first day of winter is not here yet, the holiday season is and that brings so many kinds of celebrations, chaos, kids activities, Santa sightings, last-minute family photos, college kiddos coming home for a bit and so much more.

Throughout it all, no matter what holiday is celebrated, no matter what you are feeling on any given day and, no matter how overwhelming life seems to get because of small, day-to-day things or really big, "help me, someone" things, ALWAYS make sure to stop, take a breath and reach out for a call to a friend. Grab a hug, take a walk, cry those tears if needed and regroup for as long as is needed. If at any time you need a friend or even just an ear to listen when life is overwhelming, email me at: aroundtown-cohasset@yahoo.com or, Facebook me on PM.

If any of you out there have holiday items to list and share here in the column, make sure to get them to me by TUESDAYS by 5 p.m.. If I don't receive them, I can't write, edit and share! I love to include as much as I can so send it on in.

Helping others

Another piece that helps at this time of year for me anyways is the feeling of giving to children/families who are struggling for reasons due to a financial struggle, illness or personal situation. There are many sites and drop-offs for larger groups that are wonderful however, I started to realize that we had some families right here that could use help and it felt better for me, knowing it was more local. I have four families left, two from COHASSET, one from HINGHAM and one from HULL. I just finished my other three and if you would like to help any of the remaining families, please email me at: aroundtown-cohasset@yahoo.com and I will let you know age, needs/wants. If you have places and families that you would like listed for next week, please send them in as well. It takes a village.

GIMME SHELTER

Cuddly brothers want to stay together

By Tammy Hatch

Meet Simon and Charlie, 3-month-old brothers who were abandoned along with another sibling and their mother alongside a school dumpster.

At the time of their rescue this little feline family of four were placed into foster care allowing them to safely and privately recover from their ordeal. Both of the boys have long, luxuriously thick silky fur. Simon's coat is the color of rich dark chocolate and Charlie has tiger stripes. Pale green soulful eyes complete their handsome faces.

The boys remain very cautious about their new environment at the shelter and sit nestled inside of their condo where they can watch the goings on from a safe distance. Both Simon and Charlie are approachable and are okay with being gently picked up and placed across your lap for petting. Both boys are going to need understanding and patience along with lots and lots of love.

We would like for these sweet siblings to remain together and feel they would do best in a quiet home without young children or other pets. They would also benefit greatly by living with a person or family who are not away from the home a lot and are able to spend time with them on a daily basis. Won't you come in and meet Simon and Charlie today?

Pet adoption is a serious commitment, one which should not be taken lightly. Simon and Charlie were likely abandoned by an owner who did not think through what it meant to commit to the the long-term care of a pet. Their mother did not receive proactive veterinary care, she wasn't spayed and she was allowed to roam outdoors. The result could've been a lot more tragic for the young mother and her kittens.

If you are thinking about pet adoption this holiday season, we encourage you to talk with friends and other pet-owners about what it really means to have a pet. Talk to a veterinarian about a what a pet's expected costs are for routine office visits and medical care. Have a back-up plan for your pet in the event you are unable to care for your pet due to illness, travel or other circumstance. Life happens and when it does, neglect and/or abandonment of a pet should never be considered as an acceptable solution.

You can learn more about Simon and Charlie as well as the other cats and kittens we have available for adoption by visiting us online at www.hsar.org or by visiting us at 487 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Open hours are Monday nights, 6:30 to 7:30, and Saturdays, 2 to 3 p.m. If these times are not convenient for you, special appointments can be made by calling our adoption coordinator, Judy, at 781-534-4902.

Looking for something unique to give this holiday season? Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is celebrating our very own Kittendales calendar with a special 10th year edition. Each month features a handsome man cradling one of HSAR's kittens awaiting adoption. This fund raiser has raised thousands of dollars for HSAR with every penny going directly towards the care of the cats and kittens at the shelter. Purchase yours today and help to support our efforts. Calendars be purchased on-line at www.hsar.org as well as at Toast Restaurant in Hull and at the shelter during open hours. The cost is $20.

UPDATE

Harbor dredging chugs along

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Dredging has resumed in Cohasset Harbor and is on track for completion by Jan. 31, as planned, according to Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons.

"They're coming along nicely," Gibbons reported this week. "Right now they're working on finishing up the channel."

Gibbons said the crews are working 12 hours a day with a mechanical dredge, crane and bucket. Material that is being removed is transported via scow to a near-shore disposal site off Green Harbor in Marshfield.

That progress comes despite an issue with holes in some of the equipment early in the work cycle, which Town Manager Chris Senior reported to the Board of Selectmen on Nov. 22.

Senior said the equipment had been replaced and the project had begun as of that date. A local contractor is performing the dredging, and the Army Corps of Engineers is keeping a close eye on the project to avoid another disaster.

Dredging was supposed to be completed last winter, but after two deadline extensions, the project still had not been finished. Additionally, several moorings were damaged or destroyed, and local subcontractors who worked on the project were not being paid.

The Army Corps arranged for emergency dredging of the channel in late spring so that the commercial fleet could carry on with business as usual, and has now returned to finish the job.

HILL

visual art, or music theory after college. "But they did make me think about it and question where I could go."

He's already got some practice, thanks to leadership roles he held in the troop. Hill served as patrol leader, and his troop also voted him to be their representative to the Order of the Arrow, a sort of "Scouting Honor Society" that emphasizes community service.

With the Order of the Arrow, Hill attended additional meetings with Order reps from other troops and reported back to his own, serving as a liaison. He helped out behind the scenes at council events, serving many troops in the region, and helped break down Camp Squanto at the end of the summer.

Hill's helpful streak didn't stop at camp, though.

"He was always one to pitch in if there was extra preparation to do for camping," said Scoutmaster Rob Hillman. "He's a very capable young man. And he was always very interested in helping the younger Scouts. The guys who make Eagle rank tend to be good about taking leadership responsibility and helping younger guys make ranks – that's one of the defining marks."

Hill rounded out his Eagle qualifications by making improvements to the outdoor classroom at Osgood School. He added three benches and cleared the overgrown trail so that teachers could start taking advantage of the disused space again.

"He's a very capable young man. And he was always very interested in helping the younger Scouts."
Scoutmaster Rob Hillman.

"When I was there, we would occasionally use that space," Hill remembered. "The space was there, but it wasn't being used. The project gave that area a better use."

Hill raised $275 to tackle the project and spent a few days on the job with other members of his troop. He said it didn't take long to clear the trail, compared to how long it took to align the posts for the benches so that all three would be connected.

All that during weekends and vacations from the Cambridge School of Weston.

"Usually when kids go to boarding school, that's the last you see of them," said the Scoutmaster. "This is a neat distinction. It demonstrates to anybody that, even if you have other things going on, you can focus and do it, and I'm very proud of Quentin for that."

"It was hard to be at school and work on it," Hill said. "For a while, becoming an Eagle Scout was the only thing that mattered to me. I knew I had to do it and I would be disappointed if I didn't get it."

"I started as a Tiger Scout in third grade," Hill added, "and I thought that was really cool – 'I'm in the Boy Scouts now!' I would see the kids my age and thought, 'I want to be that someday.' It's weird now, being that age and looking back at what I wanted to be."

But for Hill, Scouting wasn't just about achievement. He loved being part of the troop. He always enjoyed going to Camp Squanto and spending the week with his friends. The bi-annual whitewater rafting trip to Maine was another favorite of his.

"The camaraderie was a big deal for a while," he said. Whitewater rafting was a special trip because it knit the group tighter together in the same way that bunking together at Camp Squanto did.

Eventually, though, "It went from a social thing to, 'I really like what an Eagle Scout stands for,'" said Hill. "It's a form of independence, being able to see what you want and work for it instead of just having it handed to you. It shows you're a dedicated person."

was needed. What happened, they wanted to know, to the superintendent search process the committee had outlined in the spring? While no one had any qualms about Demas, there were definitely some qualms about the process, or lack thereof.

"We are here. We are trying to be involved," said parent Bianca Bersani. "But if there was this inkling in June or July, why not bring it up in September when you were asked about the process?"

"In September, we did not know if we had an internal candidate," Dugan said. "Louise had said that she was making no decisions until she had sat in the seat while school was in session."

Additionally, the board reminded those gathered that it's against the law for deliberation take place outside of public meetings. There was no conspiracy or secrecy behind this decision. They had met publicly the previous week to discuss the matter, and that was the first time it came up.

Unfortunately, there was a technical issue transmitting audio during that meeting, so viewers at home were unable to follow the conversation. So, for some, this week's vote came as a surprise. Bersani and others urged the committee to give the public more time to submit feedback.

"I don't want to stall this," said Francesca Arnold, another parent. "I can understand parents' frustration if they were unable to hear it. Given that the audio was off that particular night, it would be nice to have the opportunity for parents to speak with Louise one-on-one."

Arnold and Bersani both added that they had only positive impressions of Demas, but that following the process was important and would give all parents an equal chance to feel confident about the appointment.

At the very least, the board could have been more clear when it posted the agenda. "Superintendent update" doesn't really convey what the meeting is about, said parents.

While the board agreed that the agenda could have been clearer, committee member Amanda Zani said she had communicated with the PSO after the last meeting and had invited community feedback. No one on the board had received a single email about the superintendent hiring process since then.

Above that, though, it is the School Committee's job to appoint the superintendent. As elected officials, the community has already placed its trust in these five women, and none of them had any doubt that offering the job to Demas was the right thing to do.

"You can have a checklist of credentials, but you have to have a fit," said committee member Ellen Maher. "That's the most important factor in determining what's right for your district. During Louise's tenure as interim, the fit was right."

Dugan agreed.

"The confidence level that the staff and building leadership has in Louise tips it over the edge for me," she said. "And that's not something you can assess until she's been in that position for four months as interim. People feel good about her as a leader."

Even though they couldn't talk about it outside of meetings, that's exactly what all the committee members said they'd been watching for during Demas's first few months on the job, and the interim superintendent had risen above and beyond all their expectations.

That's the kind of assessment you can't get out of a formal search process.

Maybe that's why a third of districts who start this process end up hiring an internal candidate who is already acting as interim. Not only is it a way to "try before you buy," but it provides stability: something the board said the district very much needs right now, and which would be jeopardized by bringing in fresh blood through a formal search.

Cindy Matheison, president of the Cohasset Education Foundation, agreed with concerned parents that more communication would have been better. But, she said, "Not losing any time with this great candidate is in everyone's best interest and in the best interest of our children."

Selectman Paul Schubert, a former School Committee member who is also involved with the education foundation, threw in his two cents.

"I have full confidence in her," said Schubert. "She's deliberate in her thought and in her decisions and is extremely approachable. She's had plenty of time for all of you to review and see how well she works; I think she'll be a stellar candidate."

Many streetlights soon to be in town's hands

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

After more than a year of efforts, Cohasset has finally finalized a purchase and sale agreement with National Grid, which will put 511 streetlights into the Town's ownership – and into the queue for conversion to brighter, longer-lasting, and more efficient LED lights.

The Town will pay just under $14,000 for the lights – a far cry from the $35,000 that National Grid originally requested.

"The main reason for the long process was trying to limit the Town's liability," said DPW Director Brian Joyce. "We've been going back and forth with Town Counsel and National Grid's counsel... Grid drafted the document so it swayed heavily in favor of covering their liability and not so much the Town's."

The Town was able to make some revisions and send the final document back to National Grid, said Joyce, which initiates the purchase and sale. The closing should take place within 60 days.

Of course, the other reason for delay was simple: the Town had no idea what it was trying to purchase. It's not the utility's job to quantify what's being purchased or to provide location data on every streetlight in town. Nor does it have to reveal which ones are working and which ones aren't.

"The way the law is written, it allows us to purchase the lights," said Joyce, "but we had to quantify what we're buying."

There were many discrepancies between what National Grid said the Town would be buying, and what the Town actually found when it sent a consultant out into the field. Most of the discrepancies were attributable to "porkchop" lots (properties that are irregularly shaped) or changes of address.

Some non-operational lights were found and have since been repaired. The utility is crediting the Town for the time that those lights were out of order, as well as for a couple of lights that simply didn't exist, but for which the Town was still being billed.

The legwork may have been time-consuming, but Joyce said it's paid off: there's now a layer just for streetlights in the Town's GIS system. A geographic information system (GIS) is a computer system for capturing, storing, checking, and displaying data related to positions on Earth's surface.

Now that the streetlights have been mapped, it will be way easier to service them. Cohasset will be hiring a third-party contractor for operations and maintenance.

But the contractor won't be responsible for all the lights in town, just the 511 that are included in the purchase and sale. Other lights (there are 700-800 total) will still be owned and serviced by National Grid, while still others are privately owned.

All of that's on the map, so when something goes wrong, the Town will know who to call.

"We're at a god point right now where we know what we're buying and where it is," said Joyce. "We're in a position to operate and maintain it going forward and convert to LEDs."

The Town is now waiting for the Metropolitan Area Planning Council to release details about a grant for streetlight conversion to LEDs. The Department of Energy Resources is supplying funds for the grant.

If Cohasset is able to secure funding from this grant, it will enable the Alternative Energy Committee to move forward with other energy conservation measures because it will free up funding that was earmarked for the streetlight conversion this year.

Otherwise, the Town will use Green Communities grant funding secured by the committee.

GOVERNMENT

Special Town Meeting short and sweet

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Just like Thanksgiving, Cohasset's Special Town Meeting was over in no time. A quorum of 100 was reached by 7:11 p.m., and 32 minutes later, all nine Warrant articles had been approved and the meeting was adjourned. A total of 130 registered voters and 20 non-voting members attended.

This continues the Town's recent tradition of holding highly efficient town meetings. Last year's Special Town Meeting lasted just about as long, and though the Annual Town Meeting takes more time, it too is a testament to the planning and discussion that go into these meetings ahead of time.

The Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee, and other relevant boards and departments had already discussed each of the articles and come to a consensus at regular meetings leading up to Special Town Meeting. There was little need for further debate on the Town Meeting floor.

Most articles were recommended unanimously, with the exception of Article 4: Stabilization Funds. Despite this, voters unanimously supported the transfers into stabilization accounts.

Advisory Committee agreed on three of the four budgetary transfers outlined in Article 4. Two dissenting votes came from members who had opposed the creation of a special education stabilization fund at Annual Town Meeting in May, who were now opposing a transfer of $250,000 into that account.

"The stabilization loan is a one-time fix, but not a one-time problem," Advisory Chairwoman Nan Roth said in May. "Next year the budget will exceed what's available by even more." Roth and others predicted that throwing this lifeline to the schools could lead to an override in the future.

Year-over-year increase in special education spending can range from less than $50,000 to more than $400,000. The addition or subtraction of one student needing special accommodations could have a dramatic impact on the budget.

The stabilization fund was created to help offset this volatility, and the community supported the idea once again by voting unanimously to fund the account on Nov. 28.

Meanwhile, one resident at Special Town Meeting had another concern: how come OPEB, the account that funds benefits for retired teachers, was getting so little, when the liability (at $30 million) is so high?

"While the $150,000 going into the trust fund is a welcome move," said Tim Davis (Atlantic Avenue), "at this rate it will be 100 years before we have funding."

Town Manager Chris Senior clarified that two contributions had already been made to OPEB this fiscal year. One was included in the budget, and another $225,000 were allocated in the spring.

"This puts the total over $2 million, so we are making steps," Senior said.

Senior was pleased to announce that these transfers would allow the Town to reach its goal of setting aside 15 percent in reserve funds, and should help Cohasset maintain its AAA bond rating for a second year.

The cost of a new phone system, which had to be installed at the schools due to the sudden failure of the existing system, generated some discussion.

Rick Swanborg (Nichols Road), a former telecomm employee, wasn't happy about the $275,000 price tag and wanted to know exactly how that money had been spent and why the project hadn't been outsourced to Verizon.

Chief Information Officer Ron Menard explained that the cost had covered wiring, equipment, and a new PBX system. PBX, or private branch exchange, is a telephone system that switches calls between users on local lines while allowing all users to share a certain number of external phone lines.

In addition to installing new technology, Menard said that some analog lines had been maintained in case of emergency. These lines are the reason you can hear a dial tone when you pick up a landline, even if the power is out. Analog lines give schools the ability to dial 9-1-1 no matter what the situation.

The replacement aligns with the Town's overall goal to replace all of its outdated communication systems. Soon, the town-wide phone system will be updated and integrated with the school system. In fact, all of that was included in the $275,000 price tag.

The motion passed on a two-thirds vote.

The final talking point of the evening was an amendment to the Cohasset Wetlands Bylaw. Conservation Commission Chairwoman Patrice Vogelman gave an example of how the bylaw change could play out.

If someone were to dump a large amount of fill into a resource area or coastal buffer zone, said Vogelman, that would be a violation. The commission would ask this person to come in and explain themselves. The person should then make an offer to remedy the issue.

Special Town Meeting voters approved nine warrant articles in about half an hour on Monday, Nov. 28. WICKED LOCAL STAFF PHOTO

If they didn't, and if they ignored repeated requests to fix it, the Town could issue a non-criminal disposition and charge the person for the violation from the time it was first noticed to the time it was resolved in Superior Court.

The bylaw change would specify the daily fine amount as $300. Currently, the language is subjective, stating that violators may be fined up to $300 per day.

Vogelman clarified that approving the article would only affect fines related to wetlands violations and would have no effect on other non-criminal dispositions undertaken by the Town. The Meeting approved the change unanimously.

Voters also unanimously supported amendments to the Fiscal 2017 operating budget, the payment of unpaid bills from previous years, the allocation of funds for one-time costs, an adjustment within the Water Department budget, and a new bylaw regarding roof-mounted solar panels, which Fire Chief Bob Silvia wrote in order to protect firefighters who may need to access roofs in an emergency.

Voters agreed to "indefinitely postpone" reports by committees, since no committees were ready to report. The Master Plan Steering Committee is still being assembled and has yet to meet. A steering committee overseeing renovations to Town Hall and the Public Safety building has not yet been assembled.

Joy Schiffman, chairperson for the 250th Anniversary Steering Committee, spoke briefly to let the community know that they are still looking for members to help plan the sestercentennial celebration.

ROADWORK

Rebuilt causeway passes tide test

By Amanda C. Thompson

Bound Brook Dam is the next big road project for Cohasset. Replacement of the old culvert is already underway on Beechwood Street. WICKED LOCAL STAFF PHOTO

The Department of Public Works is pleased to announce the successful reconstruction of Jerusalem Road Causeway, which was completed in early November and has now withstood two King Tides.

"This shows how cooperation with federal agencies and state agencies along with the Town can make good things happen," said DPW Director Brian Joyce.

The causeway had to be reconstructed due to a failed headwall and culvert system. The old system was a granite stone clapper culvert made of stacked slabs of granite. The new one is a pre-cast concrete bottomless culvert measuring 30 feet long by eight feet wide by five feet high.

The new culvert has a similar footprint to the old one but boasts additional flow capacity. This will help avoid the build-up of stagnant organic materials that used to collect on the tidal flats and salt marsh during low tides. It should raise the quality of the water and the overall habitat of the salt marsh.

The road grade was also increased by two feet. Whereas a King Tide would have put the old causeway under a foot of water, the new one had a foot to spare. The improvements will help avoid road closures during severe weather and provide better access both for residents and for emergency vehicles.

Permitting for the causeway was a long process, said Joyce, since it cuts directly through the salt marsh. The Town had to work closely with the Department for Environmental Protection throughout the process. The project was funded with federal hazard-mitigation grants.

Post-construction monitoring will ensure that the salt marsh properly recovers, both through the improvement of tidal flow offered by the new culvert and through mitigation plantings installed by the town to help restore the habitat.

Bound Brook

Meanwhile, construction is ongoing at Bound Brook Dam on Beechwood Street. Coffer dams have been installed on the upstream and downstream sides of the culvert. Erosion controls are in place and the dam face has been cleared.

Construction teams crossed the road with a bypass pipe for the river this week and can now begin the major work of replacing the hydraulic controls and the culvert under the road. This project will be ongoing through February.

MAPS

surge calculations have been reduced by as much as 10 feet in some places, and many areas have been removed from the "velocity zone," where wave speed could potentially do even more damage than base flood elevations. That saves those property owners from more stringent foundation requirements and additional insurance costs, said Joyce.

The 2012 maps had increased the flood elevations across town and expanded the impact zone of the 100-year and 500-year storms (storms that happen once in 100 or 500 years, respectively). This moved many residents into the flood zones, requiring them to pay flood insurance for the first time.

FEMA has recognized the Blizzard of 1978 to be a 100-year storm and bases several calculations off of that event. The 2012 maps suggested wave heights four to five feet in excess of what was seen in 1978.

GZA GeoEnvironmental, Inc., which did a study for neighboring Hingham, was chosen to review the maps for Cohasset and submit the LOMR. Project Manager Peter Williams explained how FEMA had made their calculations and how GZA had tackled the problem differently.

FEMA vastly overestimated wave setup, particularly in sheltered areas where such a setup would not even be possible, officials said. In contradiction to the maps, actual storm surge has never been measured at more than four and a half feet in Cohasset.

The most recent flood insurance rate maps from FEMA projected that Atlantica would be submerged to the roofline during a severe weather event. PHOTO: OLDESALTHOUSE.COM

"The wave setup calculations are the reason for elevations going up five feet in many locations," Williams explained. "We developed better wind data – that was the key to the redevelopment of the data."

Williams said that a storm surge such as FEMA described could only occur if winds blew at 72 miles per hour for over an hour. GZA got its data from Logan Airport and used a more conservative extreme wind speed of 49 to 52 miles per hour.

After recalculating wave setup and storm surge heights, GZA added more transect lines to the map, creating a more fine-tuned view of what could be expected in some of the small, sheltered, intricate crannies of Cohasset's coastline.

This approach enabled GZA to reduce base flood elevations in several areas and remove key structures, including Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn, from what they said were unrealistic flood zones.

Some properties will still have to meet certain obligations if owners wish to undertake construction or repairs worth more than 50 percent of the property value. But no one's going to have to rebuild their home on stilts, which is an improvement over FEMA's original decision.

The maps will go into effect on March 21, 2017, after a 120-day public review period. Residents are encouraged to review the maps (available at CohassetMA.org) and submit comments or concerns to Brian Joyce by early February. Joyce can be reached by email at bjoyce@cohassetMA.org.

OUR VIEW

Feeling good about Cohasset

Special Town Meeting was over in nearly record time. The Jerusalem Road causeway won't be flooded at wicked high tides. Dredging the harbor looks to be back on track. Flood maps have been amended. We have a new Superintendent of Schools – Louise Demas – who had been serving as interim school chief. And we avoided the proverbial "nationwide search!"

What happened to the Cohasset where process trumped common sense; town meetings dragged on and on; the budget gave everyone a migraine and infrastructure work was something we only dreamed about?

Will someone pinch us so we wake up? (Just kidding).

Right now good government is doing good things and incorporating transparency and public involvement in the process.

Are things perfect in this lovely hamlet by the sea? Perfection will never occur nor should it – that might be boring! There are still serious issues facing Cohasset including tackling OPEB by putting enough money aside over time to pay for the town's obligations for retiree benefits. Other towns are also climbing that mountain.

We are encouraged that a committee is off and running to fully examining the challenge of affordable housing. Without a solid plan to develop affordable housing, Cohasset could once again fall under the cudgel of Chapter 40B (the state law) that allows developers to skirt some zoning regulations in exchange for affordable housing.

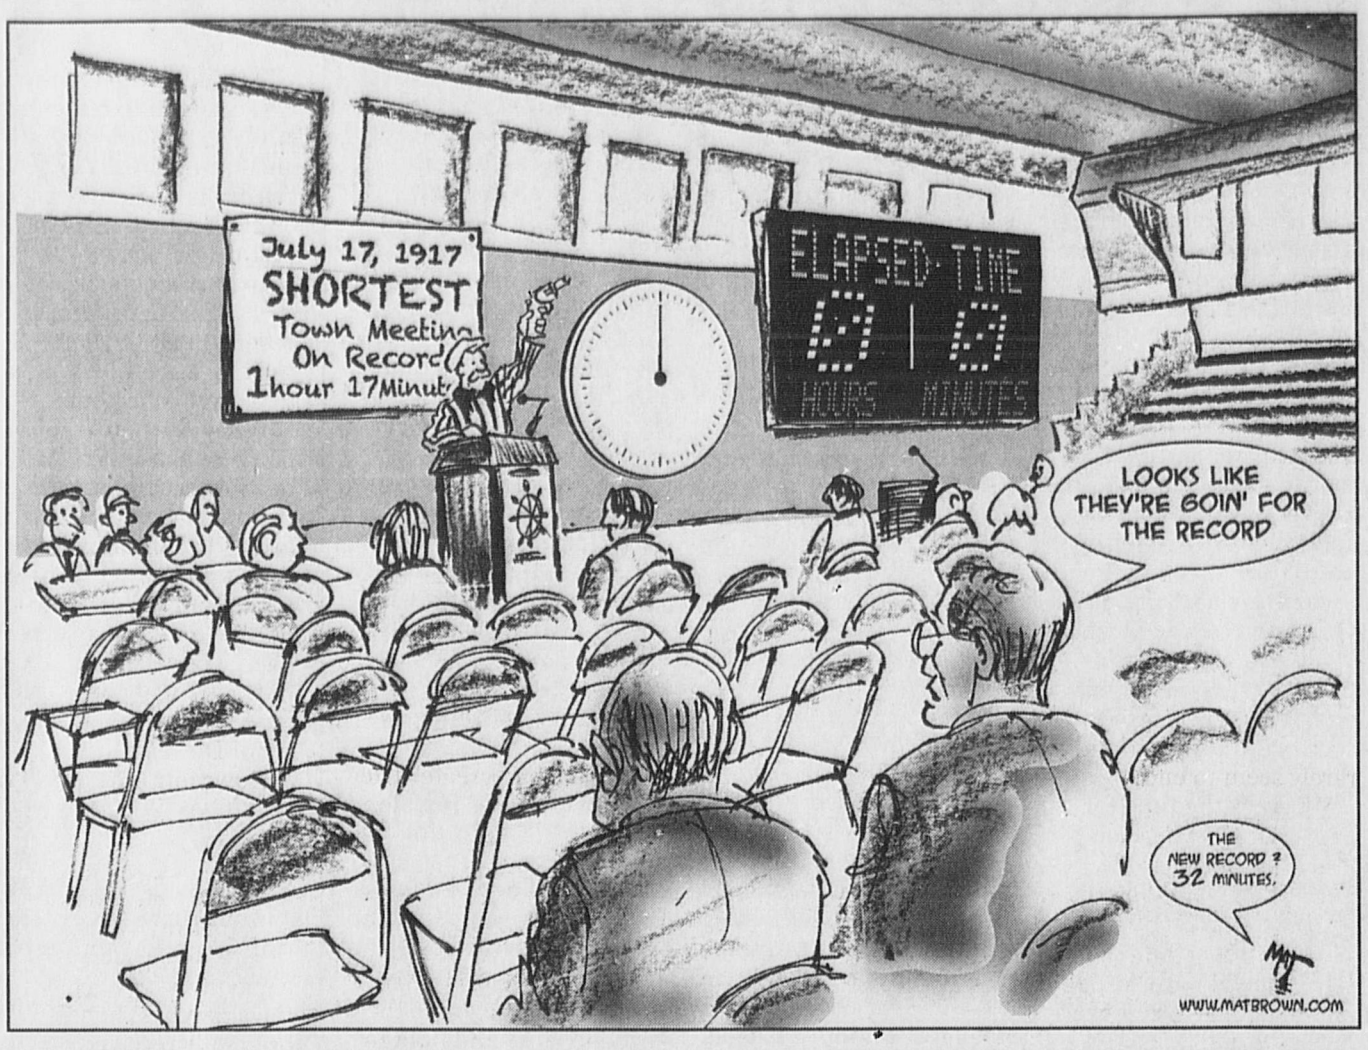
The Master Plan Steering Committee is also being developed. Let's hope the new Master Plan will set a road map for growth and redevelopment that will be embraced and followed. There is certainly some enthusiasm to see that happen.

We also realize that many residents are unhappy with mammoth homes on small lots and clear-cutting land to do so. There should be some healthy debate on this subject before the spring annual Town Meeting.

In our years of covering Cohasset, we have always been impressed with the number of people willing to serve – or to add their voice – to projects and problems. People, for the most part, really like living here and want to keep our town's unique qualities and quality of life.

We also love the holiday season in town. The Community Center just hosted the annual Jingle Bell Walk, which has become a day-after-Thanksgiving tradition for many families, creating cherished memories. Saturday is the annual Village Fair hosted by our local churches and next week is the Village Stroll. Who could ask for more?

We certainly have a lot to be appreciative of in Cohasset, which has to be one of the prettiest towns anywhere with its pristine common and spectacular ocean vistas. No wonder Hollywood has sought this locale time and time again!



PANTRY CORNER

Baked goods were totally delicious

Hello and welcome to another edition of the pantry corner. First, we would like to thank all our friends, families and community members for their generosity at Thanksgiving. We would particularly like to thank all our holiday bakers. The baked goods this year were fabulous. We received delicious breads, pies, cookies and brownies and had enough to put in each Thanksgiving dinner box. With the holidays coming up, gift cards to grocery stores are especially appreciated.

Items we need: canned Pineapple rings, yams, corn, coffee, fruit juice (apple, cranberry) hot chocolate, boxed scalloped potatoes, mustard, quick bread mixes (cranberry, corn, banana), and baked goods.

The Food Pantry is open for donations every Tuesday morning between 8 and 8:30 a.m. If this does not fit into your schedule there is a donation box at St. Anthony's Parish Center in the foyer, one at Willcutt Commons on Sohier Street, and one at Stop & Shop. Please be sure not to put any perishables in the donation boxes.

We are also happy to arrange a meeting time with anyone who contacts us at the food pantry.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Why the arts matter to all

By Elaine Sorrentino

Whether you're a lover of music, dance, theater or visual arts, shared moments of experiencing the arts unites us all.

For the third consecutive year, South Shore Conservatory (SSC) participated in MASSCreative's Arts Matter Day to publicly express why the arts matter to us. Created as a vehicle for showing our legislators the importance of the arts to all populations, Arts Matter Day allowed us to crow about how the arts make a difference in our personal lives.

SSC was one of 640 participating arts and cultural organizations and individuals. Among the other organizations who joined us in posting photos and videos on social media were the Museum of Fine Arts, Longy School of Music, Artists for Humanity, Arts Boston and BosTix, Oliver Ames High School, the Clark Institute of Art, BU Arts Initiative, Boston Lyric Opera, Institute of Contemporary ARtBoston, and a host of others. Parents, students, faculty and staff members took pen to paper, taking stock of their many reasons for needing the arts in their lives.

SSC moms were perhaps the most passionate about their love for the arts. They see the difference the arts make to their children every day. Music Together moms wrote that the arts matter to them because they shape their children's lives, and instill a sense of wonder in their children.

Preschool mom Lara Thompson said "the joy of singing and learning to play music last a lifetime." An active member of SSC's Woman Song ensemble, Lara would know!

Other young moms chose less wordy responses to the question of how music makes them feel. "ALIVE!" and "like dancing" and "like breathing!" were all testaments to the power of the arts in helping us learn, express and be human.

At the Hingham Senior Center, our adult ukulele students proved that the benefits of the arts doesn't stop at childhood. As they posed for a picture, proudly displaying their ukuleles, these seniors shared that the arts matter to them because they give them great joy. And this statement gave their instructor John McCarthy great joy!

Our Director of Performance Beth MacLeod Largent had the most unique and musical affirmation of the arts. In her lovely, operatic voice, she crooned, "The #Arts Matter at SSC there is no doubt, just take a look and you will see! Children learn things much faster, from colors to ABC, adults love to make music too, alone or in a group, it's about community."

Perhaps the most poignant testimonial was made by SSC President Kathy Czerny who eloquently articulated that the arts are important because they remind us of the way in which we're the same, rather than the ways in which we're different! I love this very simple and true statement. Whether you're a lover of music, dance, theater or visual arts, shared moments of experiencing the arts unites us all.

These experiences don't begin and end in cultural settings. As the National Anthem, Sweet Caroline, or Take Me Out to the Ballgame plays at sporting events, everyone unites in song. I recall at the 2016 Rio Olympics, when Jamaica's gold medal sprinter Usain Bolt paused his moment in the limelight, upon hearing the first few notes of The Star Spangled Banner, and requested that the reporter show respect and stand with him in silence to honor the U.S. National Anthem. It was a powerful music-inspired moment.

We here at South Shore Conservatory can't imagine our life without the arts. Can you? To learn more about SSC programs and events, visit sscmusic.org or find us on Facebook.

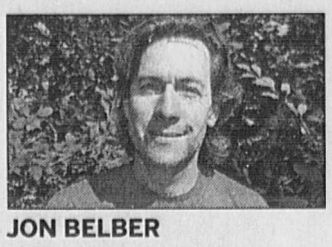
GROWING ON THE FARM

Don't miss Holly Hill Fair on Saturday



JON BELBER

The seed catalogs are arriving. The farmers, still pleasantly full of soil in their boots and winter squash and greens on the farm stand tables, will pile up the colorful magazines on the farm house desk to contemplate at a later date.

The seeds to order are many and the time to start sowing is less than three months away. It must feel like those who long for spring training baseball when their team loses or does not advance in October or late September. With season extension in the greenhouse and soil arriving in a week, the seasons blend together and rarely seem to end.

Where is the time for pause? The greenery is already hung by the chimney. When is one supposed to reflect and relax? Pacing is a very important part of any job, especially farming. In a long year, with droughts and blizzards, the farmer needs to see the short return and the end result. In hoping for good conditions and situations, radish take 28 days to be ready and broccoli 120 days. Patience is an important component.

A youngster anticipating a gift and a present must also exhibit patience. When writing a list to post or send by U.S. mail to a pole in the north, one needs to wait many days to even see if there is a chance it will come true. The gifts that people hope for and desire take time to make, fabricate and hold.

The catalogs advertising gifts from a store have already come. One can also leaf through those pages and send away money and numbers and expiration dates to a remote location in hopes that they too will arrive. This week, a shopper can come to the farm to peruse and spend time looking at gifts and items that took a long time to make and create.

The 8th annual Holly Day Fair at the farm on Saturday the 3rd features artists, crafters and growers. Of course the farmers will be there, as they are still clipping chard and kale from the fields. A rustic furniture maker has a chair made with wood from the forest and a spoon with which to stir soup for the soul. A sewer has bags and pillows that are full of many colors and natural designs that delight the eye and provide comfort for the weary. A jeweler sets stones and precious gems in patterns that are unique and if worn, show a one-of-a-kind style. Homemade jams with berries grown near. Soap with herbs to soothe and heal.

Many will be there with food and nourishment and hands-on chances to also make and create. The organic farmer is not alone in celebrating and sharing the fruition of hard work and labor. Join us at the farm, all year, and this Saturday too. How nice to let the catalogs pile up, while you come to see the work up close and hold in your hand.

SUNDAY

Author talks about our 'Disordered World'

Saturday, after the Village Holiday Fair, and before your head is overflowing with seasonal things, recenter yourself by coming to the library to hear author James Cronin discuss the liberal world order that has been in effect since the end of the Vietnam War. Boston College History Professor Cronin has thoroughly researched his topic.

His book, "Global Rules: America, Britain and a Disordered World," presents the long view to help us understand both the international financial architecture and single global order created by the UK and the USA right up to the current time.

Will the recent Brexit vote and the US presidential election cause this stable direction to swerve? Perhaps that's a question for the author to field when he comes to Cohasset for a reading and discussion on Dec. 4 at 4 pm. See you then.

A wine and cheese reception will follow Mr. Cronin's talk, and Buttonwood Books will have copies of Global Rules: America, Britain and a Disordered World available for purchase and signing. Admission is free. Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by Dean and Hamilton Realtors, A Taste for Wine and Spirits, and the Goodale Insurance Company. For more information about the AuthorTalk series, call the library at 383-1348 or visit online www.cohassetlibrary.org.

GOOD DEEDS

Do it now when it comes to mortgage discharges

Whether or not the discharge is recorded by the lending institution or the individual property owner, it will fall upon the property owner to make sure that all necessary documents have been recorded at the Registry.

WILLIAM P. O'DONNELL

Some of us are old enough to remember that our parents and grandparents used to celebrate when they paid off their mortgage. These events were called "mortgage burning parties." It was a time to rejoice and reflect on all the hard work and sacrifice it took to pay off your home.

Today, for many homeowners, mortgage burning parties are a thing of the past. However, what should not be forgotten is when you make your last payment, be sure a mortgage discharge or satisfaction of mortgage discharge has been filed with the Registry of Deeds.

Now your next question might be, "Why do I need a mortgage discharge? After all, I don't owe anything to the bank, so why shouldn't I have clear title to my property?" It's a good question. Here's the answer: When you originally received a mortgage, a lending institution placed a lien on the property to make sure that they are paid back in full.

When the debt is paid, many banks or finance companies will send the mortgage discharge to the Registry. This document tells anyone looking at the Registry records that your lien has been paid off. Other lending institutions will forward it directly to the property owner who then becomes responsible for making sure the mortgage discharge is recorded at the Registry.

However, please remember the following: Whether or not the discharge is recorded by the lending institution or the individual property owner, it will fall upon the property owner to make sure that all necessary documents have been recorded at the Registry.

If you are wondering whether your mortgage has been discharged, you can find out two ways by going to our Registry's on-line record's database at: norfolkdeeds.org and typing in your name and address. Another option is to call our customer service center at 781-461-6101 between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

And what if you happen to find out that there is no mortgage discharge statement on file at the Registry? You should contact the lending institution and make arrangements to get an original mortgage discharge filed at the Registry by you or the lending institution. The cost of filing a mortgage discharge document – set by the state statute – is $76. The Registry cannot accept a copy of the discharge document or a fax copy of the original.

What if the lending institution is no longer around or has merged with another entity? How would you get a mortgage discharge? You could go to the Norfolk Registry of Deeds website: norfolkdeeds.org and under our "Services" dropdown tab, go to mortgage discharge. There is resource information available that can assist you in tracking down the contact information of the lending institution that is responsible for the mortgage discharge.

Remember, most closing attorneys would want to record a mortgage discharge on past mortgages before allowing the sale of your property. Also any lending institution may think you still have additional credit obligations if the mortgage discharge has not been recorded. So there is no time like the present if a mortgage has been paid off to take make sure a mortgage discharge document has been filed with us at the Registry of Deeds.

To learn more about these and other Registry of Deeds events and initiatives, like us at facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds or follow us on twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at: norfolkdeeds.org.

Around The Real Estate Block: Cohasset property sales totaled 19 for October 2016. The average property sale price (including residential and commercial) for October was $727,528. Homestead filings for October were 14. There was 1 foreclosure deed filed against a Cohasset property for the month of October.

FOOTBALL

Awesome win

Skippers improve Thanksgiving streak to seven

By John R. Johnson

In the early going, it looked as if the Hull High football team was going to be in a thankful mood following its holiday matchup with Cohasset. The Skippers handed the Pirates an early score on a botched punt that led to a 1-yard touchdown run by senior captain Fern Barry four minutes into the game.

However, the Pirates then turned into the givers, turning the ball over three times in the red zone to help Cohasset earn a 20-6 victory.

It was Cohasset's seventh straight win in the Thanksgiving rivalry. The Skippers have beaten their South Shore League rivals 11 consecutive times overall.

Cohasset relied on a 2-yard TD run by Noah Froio, and a pair of touchdown passes from Xander Schubert to junior tight end Will Thomas.

Hull (4-7) was led by Christian Olivieri (83 rushing yards).

"This is an awesome win," said Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw. "We've had a tough year in a lot of dogfights. We ended up 5-5 and (the players) get their name on this trophy. The seniors haven't lost to Hull in their entire high school career, so they have a couple of things they can hang their hats on.

"We were a bit rusty. Our offense woke up in the second half, and the defense played well the entire game."

After the early score, Hull appeared poised to score on its next possession when Joe Coffey pressured Schubert, resulting in a Peter Gianabis interception. Hull advanced to the Cohasset 32-yard line before the drive stalled.

Cohasset took advantage of some undisciplined play from the Pirates to tie the game, 6-6, when Froio dove in from 2 yards out with 3:48 left in the first quarter. Cohasset, which benefited from 60 yards of Hull penalties on the drive, went for the two points, but he play was snuffed out by Olivieri.

An interception by Cohasset's Liam Lynch set up Cohasset's next score with a minute left in the first half. After the Skippers covered 46 yards on a Schubert pass to Mark Mahoney, Thomas pulled in a 3-yard pass for a 13-6 lead after Clifford Ward's PAT.

Hull threatened again, but freshman quarterback Trevor MacDonald was intercepted by Froio to end the first half.

Hull sophomore Hudson Sestito picked off Schubert midway through the third quarter to give Hull excellent field position after a 20-yard return. But Hull's bid ended when a halfback option pass from Barry was intercepted by Cohasset's Mike Nolan in the end zone.

Cohasset put the game away when Schubert hit Thomas with a 2-yard scoring strike that Thomas grabbed at his feet. The play of the drive was an 11-yard completion to Froio on fourth-and-nine.

"That was a huge play," said Afanasiw. "Noah has great feet and hands so we took him out of the backfield and put him over there. It was something we knew we had to do. And Thomas is an exceptional athlete and made some nice catches."

SSBC Survivor Series

Good news - the answer is yes.

Yes, there is baseball for kids in the dead of winter. The 2016-17 edition of the hugely popular Survivor Series is back at the South Shore Baseball Club in Hingham.

South Shore youngsters from ten to twelve years of age have enjoyed this baseball oasis in the heart of the cold weather months since its origination in 1999.

This year's Survivor Series are set for December 27-30 between Christmas and New Year's and again during the February school break from February 20-23.

The games are played on a turfed field at Hingham's South Shore Sports Center with Incrediballs, which due to their reduced flight distance allow a reasonable facsimile of baseball to be played indoors. Special "SSBC Niles Rules" are applicable, having sprung from the fertile baseball mind of club founder, president and two time Massachusetts High School Coach of the Year, Frank Niles.

Baseball skills are also addressed with participants exposed to drill stations for between game work on some of the basic fundamentals of the game.

Additionally, team recors and individual statistics are recorded with team champions and individual home run, RBI and batting leaders crowned and posted on the club web site at the completion of competition.

December's Survivor Series competition will be the 24th in SSBC history. In that time there have been three Triple Crown winners: Brian Carney of Braintree in December of 2010 with a .680 average, 8 home runs and 22 rbi; Brennan Carney of Norwell in December of 2010 with a .$^{68}/_{8}$ HR/19 rbi; and Jake Schulte of Hingham in February of 2016 (.750/5/15). Burke's nine home runs ranks him as the single series home run leader.

Players may ender as individuals and be assigned to a team or may join as a group making it possible for friends to sign up together and play on the same team. For registration and/or additional information call 800-GO4-HITS or 781-749-6466 or visit www.ssbc.com.

Toros down Saints

South Coastal Hockey League roundup through Nov. 27

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Toros were not going to be denied in their South Coastal Hockey League game with the Saints.

They battled back from deficits of 2-0 and 3-2 in the game as the Toros rallied for a 4-3 come from behind win over the Saints.

Paul Brinkman scored his second goal of the game to break a 3-3 tie in the third period and give the Toros a 4-3 lead. Rick Welch, the Toros goalie made sure the lead stood up with some outstanding saves in the final period.

Richard D. Grisdale

PEPPERELL – Richard Dennis Grisdale, 92, of Pepperell, formerly of Cohasset, died peacefully at his home on November 12, 2016, after a period of failing health.

Richard D. Grisdale

He was the devoted husband of 63 years to the late Charlotte Fottler (Jones) Grisdale, loving father of daughter Jennifer Krieger and her husband Barry of Pepperell; son Todd and his late wife Karen of Duxbury; and two grandsons: Ethan and Aaron Krieger. Born in Barrow-In-Furness, Lancashire, England, Mr. Grisdale was the son of Frances Mary and Richard Stephen Grisdale. He immigrated to the United States at age two.

Mr. Grisdale was a sergeant in the Army Air Corps during World War II and was injured during his service. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), he spent the first half of his professional career as a mechanical engineer for Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, where he was involved in the design of many ships, including the first nuclear-powered surface vessel, the USS Long Beach. He was later "loaned out" to Electric Boat, where he became a member of the design team for the first nuclear-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus. Mr. Grisdale then spent the second half of his career at Stone and Webster Engineering in Boston, where he designed both nuclear and fossil-fuel power plants.

A wise and gentle soul, Mr. Grisdale loved "all creatures great and small," especially Golden Retriever dogs, a number of whom he raised and adopted over the years. His love and respect for the natural world remains reflected in his hobbies, which included photography and painting. Mr. Grisdale had a great sense of humor as well as a keen sense of mischief. He has no idea how much he will be missed.

A memorial service will be held December 3, 2016 at 11 a.m. at the McGaffigan Funeral Home, 37 Main Street (Rte. 113) Pepperell.

In lieu of flowers, please consider making a donation in Mr. Grisdale's name to Yankee Golden Retriever Rescue, PO Box 808, Hudson, MA 01749-0808. Please see www.mcgaffiganfimeral.com.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
